CORPORATE DISCLOSURE STATEMENT

None of Amici Curiae (identified in Appendix) has a parent corporation. No publicly held company owns more than 10% of stock in any of Amici Curiae.

STATEMENT OF INTEREST

Bay Area Lawyers for Individual Freedom (“BALIF”) is a bar association of more than 700 lesbian, gay, bisexual, and transgender (“LGBT”) members of the San Francisco Bay Area legal community. As the nation’s oldest and largest LGBT bar association, BALIF promotes the professional interests of its members and the legal interests of the LGBT community at large. To accomplish this mission, BALIF actively participates in public policy debates concerning the rights of LGBT individuals and families. BALIF frequently appears as amicus curiae in cases, like this one, where it believes it can provide valuable perspective and argument that will inform court decisions on matters of broad public importance.

Additional amici include a broad array of organizations, including national, metropolitan, local, and minority bar associations and national and local non-profit organizations. Each organization supporting this amicus brief is dedicated to ensuring that its constituents and all others in this country, including gay men and lesbians, receive equal treatment under the law. See Appendix. All parties have consented to Amici’s submission of this brief.¹

¹ Pursuant to Federal Rule of Appellate Procedure 32, Amici Curiae affirm that no counsel for any party authored this brief in whole or in part, and no counsel or party made a monetary contribution intended to fund the preparation or submission of this brief. No person other than Amici Curiae, their members, or their counsel made a monetary contribution to its preparation or submission.

SUMMARY OF ARGUMENT

Foundational to the Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment is the principle that “the Constitution ‘neither knows nor tolerates classes among citizens.’” Romer v. Evans, 517 U.S. 620, 623 (1996) (quoting Plessy v. Ferguson, 163 U.S. 537, 559 (1896) (Harlan, J., dissenting)). In line with this principle, it has long been bedrock law that “separate but equal” treatment does not satisfy the federal Constitution. The very notion is a contradiction in terms: as the Supreme Court has emphasized since Brown v. Board of Education, the Constitution’s promise of true equality is necessarily breached by government-sponsored separation of a disfavored class. The bans that prohibit same-sex couples from marrying in Utah and Oklahoma (“the Marriage Bans”) betray these longstanding values. They exclude a class of people—gay men and lesbians—from the venerated institution of marriage.

This brief explains the harm inflicted on gay men and lesbians as a result of the Marriage Bans’ pernicious classification. It also explains how nothing short of or different from marriage itself can cure the constitutional violations. Specifically, this brief discusses why neither civil unions nor domestic partnerships, which are available to same-sex couples in some states (though not Utah or Oklahoma), would be an adequate or appropriate constitutional remedy. Because the Marriage Bans exclude committed same sex couples from access to the institution of marriage, they and their families are separated out, stigmatized, deprived of benefits and responsibilities enjoyed by their heterosexual counterparts, and exposed to increased discrimination. These effects are repugnant to the Constitution's equality guarantee and are in no way mitigated by access to the separate and inherently inferior systems of domestic partnership or civil union. Amici urge this Court to uphold the district courts' conclusions and find that the Marriage Bans disadvantage gays and lesbians without any legitimate justification. Kitchen v. Herbert, --- F.Supp.2d ----, 2013 WL 6697874 (D. Utah); Bishop v. Oklahoma, --- F.Supp.2d ----, 2014 WL 116013 (N.D. Okla. 2014).

ARGUMENT

I. CLASSIFICATIONS THAT SERVE ONLY TO DISADVANTAGE THE BURDENED GROUP FAIL RATIONAL BASIS REVIEW

The Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment is “a commitment to the law’s neutrality where the rights of persons are at stake.” Romer, 517 U.S. at 623. The Clause “requires the consideration of whether the classifications drawn by any statute constitute an arbitrary and invidious discrimination.” Loving v. Virginia, 388 U.S. 1, 10 (1967). Even under the most deferential review—the rational basis test—a state law must be “rationally related to a legitimate state interest.” E.g., City of Cleburne, Tex. v. Cleburne Living Ctr., 473 U.S. 432, 440 (1985).² “The State may not rely on a classification whose relationship to an asserted goal is so attenuated as to render the distinction arbitrary or irrational.” Id. at 446.

A law that classifies persons for no reason other than to confer disfavored legal status fails even rational basis review because it serves no legitimate governmental purpose. See Romer, 517 U.S. at 633-35. As the Supreme Court repeatedly has explained, “[i]f the constitutional conception of ‘equal protection of the laws’ means anything, it must at the very least mean that a bare . . . desire to harm a politically unpopular group cannot constitute a legitimate governmental interest.” Id. at 634-35 (quoting Dep’t of Agric. v. Moreno, 413 U.S. 528, 534 (1973)). Accordingly, in Romer, the Supreme Court struck down a Colorado constitutional amendment that prohibited governmental protection of gay and lesbian individuals. Id. at 636. The amendment, the Court found, was a “status-based enactment” that “impose[d] a special disability upon [gays and lesbians] alone.” Id. at 631, 635. It “inflict[ed] on [gays and lesbians] immediate, continuing, and real injuries that outrun and belie any legitimate justifications that may be claimed for it.” Id. at 635; see also Eisenstadt v. Baird, 405 U.S. 438, 454-55 (1972) (law prohibiting distribution of contraceptives to unmarried individuals lacked a rational basis and violated the Equal Protection Clause).

So too, here. The injuries that the Marriage Bans inflict upon gay men and lesbians, as amici explain below, “outrun and belie” any legitimate governmental purpose that might be claimed for them.

II. THE MARRIAGE BANS ESTABLISH AN UNEQUAL, TWO-TIERED REGIME AND HARM GAY AND LESBIAN INDIVIDUALS AND THEIR CHILDREN

The Marriage Bans’ overt discrimination against same-sex couples in Utah and Oklahoma establishes a regime in which same-sex couples are not simply relegated to second-class status, but rather are not recognized – and therefore do not “count” – at all. Further, as explained below, the availability of domestic partnership or civil union as exists in some other states would not cure the Marriage Bans’ constitutional deficiency. Whether or not such options are available, by excluding same-sex couples from marriage itself, the Marriage Bans cause severe, actual harm to gay and lesbian individuals and their families.

A. The Legalistic Designation of Domestic Partnership Is Patently Inferior to the Revered Institution of Marriage

Time-honored precedent establishes that state-created, separate institutions for disfavored groups are inherently unequal. As the Supreme Court has repeatedly recognized since Brown v. Board of Education, 347 U.S. 483, 495

(1954), such separate institutions offend the guarantees of the Equal Protection Clause. See, e.g., Mayor & City Council of Balt. v. Dawson, 350 U.S. 877 (1955) (public beaches and bathhouses); Holmes v. City of Atlanta, 350 U.S. 879 (1955) (public golf courses); Gayle v. Browder, 352 U.S. 903 (1956) (public transportation); New Orleans City Park Improvement Ass'n v. Detiege, 358 U.S. 54 (1958) (public parks); Peterson v. City of Greenville, 373 U.S. 244 (1963) (restaurants); Brown v. Louisiana, 383 U.S. 131 (1966) (public libraries).

Even where separate institutions have the trappings of their more well-regarded counterparts, inequalities remain by definition. Though some distinctions may be intangible, their social significance is real, and they remain constitutionally impermissible. See Sweatt v. Painter, 339 U.S. 629, 634 (1950) (noting, in striking down Texas's segregated law schools, that "the [all-white] Law School possesses to a far greater degree those qualities which are incapable of objective measurement but which make for greatness in a law school"); United States v. Virginia, 518 U.S. 515, 557 (1996) (holding that Virginia could not restrict women to a military program that lacked, among other features, the "prestige" of Virginia Military Institute).

Nor would the blatant separation wrought by the Marriage Bans be cured by shunting same-sex couples into something short of real marriage, such as the legalistic apparatus of "domestic partnership" or "civil union." Both of these are different from and inferior to marriage. Even if domestic partnership were available in Utah and Oklahoma, that would not remedy the harm caused by the exclusion from marriage but rather would provide a square peg for a round hole. As in Sweatt, “[i]t is difficult to believe that one who had a free choice” between domestic partnership or civil union and true marriage “would consider the question close.” Sweatt, 339 U.S. at 634.

1. Marriage Is a Uniquely Revered Institution in American Society

Marriage holds a hallowed status in our society. As courts repeatedly recognize, marriage can be an essential aspect of the human experience. Far “more than a routine classification for purposes of certain statutory benefits,” United States v. Windsor, 133 S. Ct. 2675, 2692 (2013), marriage is “an institution of transcendent historical, cultural and social significance,” Kerrigan v. Comm’r of Pub. Health, 957 A.2d 407, 416-17 (Conn. 2008), “an institution more basic in our civilization than any other.” Williams v. North Carolina, 317 U.S. 287, 303 (1942). Its significance to the couple involved is unparalleled; it is “intimate to the degree of being sacred.” Griswold v. Connecticut, 381 U.S. 479, 486 (1965). Furthermore, marriage is a time-honored demonstration to family, friends, and the community of a loving commitment and mutual responsibility between two people—and implies a return promise by society to respect that commitment. See Turner v. Safley, 482 U.S. 78, 95 (1987) (recognizing that marriage is an “expression[] of emotional support and public commitment”). The institution is “a highly public celebration of the ideals of mutuality, companionship, intimacy, fidelity, and family.” Goodridge v. Dep’t of Pub. Health, 798 N.E.2d 941, 954 (Mass. 2003). The right to marry, accordingly, “has long been recognized as one of the vital personal rights essential to the orderly pursuit of happiness by free men [and women].” Loving, 388 U.S. at 12; see also Perez v. Lippold, 198 P.2d 17, 18-19 (Cal. 1948) (“Marriage is . . . something more than a civil contract subject to regulation by the state; it is a fundamental right of free men.”). The enormous personal and social significance of marriage is, indeed, a core premise of the decisions below. See, e.g., Jackson v. Abercrombie, 884 F. Supp. 2d 1065, 1108 (D. Haw. 2012) (explaining that “the title ‘marriage’ has social benefits and cultural meaning”).

As a result of the special significance of marriage in society, the institution has a critical “signaling” role, apart from the specific legal obligations it entails. Elizabeth S. Scott, Social Norms and the Legal Regulation of Marriage, 86 Va. L. Rev. 1901, 1917 (2000). The designation of marriage establishes norms for how the two married individuals conduct themselves and how society behaves toward them.

First, married people understand they are to be emotionally and financially supportive, honest, and faithful to one another. See J.A. at 2307-08 (Peplau Decl.

¶¶ 10-13). Although married couples may modify their expectations and behavior over time, they benefit by beginning with a common understanding of the marital relationship, gleaned from a lifetime of participating in society, hearing about marriage, and observing married couples. See Jeffrey M. Adams & Warren H. Jones, The Conceptualization of Marital Commitment: An Integrative Analysis, 72 J. Personality Soc. Psychol. 1177 (1997). This shared understanding assists married individuals in meeting their own and their spouse's expectations and motivates them to work through temporary difficulties. See J.A. at 2318 (Peplau Decl. ¶ 44) (“The security of marriage often enables spouses to adopt a long-term perspective, putting off immediate rewards to build a future life together and encouraging mutual sacrifice.”).

The institution of marriage likewise provides common ground for others in society to understand a couple's relationship. Because marriage is universally recognized, married couples are readily treated in a manner that reflects their personal commitment and concomitant legal and social status. See J.A. at 2211-12 (Cott Decl. ¶¶ 10-13) (noting that excluding same-sex couples from marriage “mark[s] some citizens as unfit to join the national family because of their choice of loved one”). Spouses are understood as family members. When a married couple opens a joint bank account, or checks into a hotel, or applies for a credit card, or attends a parent-teacher conference, or accompanies a child on a plane flight, or jointly rents a car, there is no need for explanation or documentary proof of the relationship. See generally Varnum v. Brien, 763 N.W.2d 862, 883-84 (Iowa 2009) (“Iowa’s marriage laws” are “designed to bring a sense of order to the legal relationships of committed couples and their families in myriad ways.”).

For these reasons and others, many people regard getting married as the most important day in their lives—marriage is “the ‘happy ending,’ . . . reflected in and perpetuated through law, custom, literature, and even folk tales.” J.A. at 2211 (Cott Decl. ¶ 10).

2. Statutory Schemes that Recognize Domestic Partnership and Civil Unions Are Legalistic Mechanisms That Lack the Significance, Stability, and Meaning of Marriage

Nor would shifting to a scheme that recognizes domestic partnership and civil unions remedy the harm caused by the exclusion of same-sex couples from the institution of marriage. Domestic partnership and civil unions plainly lack the status, cultural significance, and social meaning of marriage. Unlike marriage, these legalistic categories are not an effective marker of family relationships. And same-sex couples who have access only to domestic partnerships or civil unions are deprived of many of the tangible and intangible benefits and responsibilities that come with the marital commitment. First, the legal categories of domestic partnership and civil unions are novel and unstable. These categories were invented recently,³ and their meaning is ever-shifting. Even the name of the category varies from state to state. Compare Nev. Rev. Stat. § 122A (“domestic partnership”) with Haw. Rev. Stat. § 572B (“civil union”). For example, in Hawaii, both the names and legal contours of the second-tier protections for same sex couples have continued to shift in ways that perpetuate confusion and signify inferior status for same-sex couples.⁴ Domestic partnership first began in California as a term used in local ordinances that conferred few legal benefits. It is now one of several labels available in different states to registered same-sex couples who are prohibited from marrying. In contrast, Nevada modeled its domestic partnership statute on California’s revised domestic partnership statute, which provides that domestic partners must receive the same legal entitlements as married couples. In Hawaii, the civil union statute is intended to serve the same purpose, but using an entirely different name. These different and inconsistent labels further obscure the legal rights and responsibilities of same sex couples. See Jackson, 884 F. Supp. 2d. at 1077; Sevcik v. Sandoval, 911 F. Supp. 2d 996, 1001 (D. Nev. 2012).

Not surprisingly, in light of their novel and uncertain stature, domestic partnership and civil unions are not valued by society in a way that compares to marriage. People do not associate these legalistic relationships with the stability and permanence that characterize marriage. This is evident in the way government treats domestic partnership. In Nevada, for example, domestic partners need not solemnize their partnership, whereas marriage requires solemnization by a judge, justice or minister. See Sevcik, 911 F. Supp. 2d at 1000-01.

In turn, the registration of a domestic partnership is less meaningful to same-sex couples than getting married would be. The complex emotions that people experience when they get married are well-established—as well as the joy and human closeness they feel when they attend a wedding—simply do not attach to the ministerial step of registering a domestic partnership or entering a civil union. Even when domestic partners celebrate their legal registration with a ceremony, the terrain is unfamiliar: Is the event a wedding? A commitment ceremony? Something else? The lack of a common vocabulary underscores the institution's lack of societal stature

These reminders continue throughout the relationship. Even the simple act of referring to one's "partner" can be wrought with embarrassment and misunderstanding: same-sex couples can be left searching for a manner to explain, no matter how uncomfortable the setting, whether they are referring to their domestic partner or their professional, athletic, or law partners. Subsequently, same-sex couples must often explain the intricacies of state family law to friends and potentially hostile strangers alike.

Such ambiguities, and the resulting risk of differential treatment, would be less likely if same-sex couples could accurately refer to themselves as "married" and as husband or wife, a vocabulary that is universally understood. See N.J. Civ. Union Rev. Comm'n, The Legal, Medical, Economic and Social Consequences of New Jersey's Civil Union Law 2, 16 (2008), available at <http://www.nj.gov/lps/dcr/downloads/CURC-Final-Report-.pdf> ("New Jersey Commission Report").

In sum, marriage has a unique status in American society. There is no dispute that marriage means far more than inheritance rights, powers of attorney, or community property. It is, instead, "the definitive expression of love, commitment, and family." J.A. at 2211 (Cott Decl. ¶ 10). Domestic partnership would be a patently inferior alternative. Simply put: "[N]o other means of recognizing a freely-chosen intimate relationship has the same meaning, status, significance, and benefits as marriage.” Id. at 2228 (Cott Decl. ¶ 80).

B. Excluding Same-Sex Couples From the Institution of Marriage Causes Tangible Legal and Economic Harm

Exclusion of same-sex couples from the institution of marriage results in the denial of many real and concrete legal and economic benefits that are premised upon married status. See generally J.A. at 2110 (Badgett Decl. ¶ 11) [The Amendment banning same-sex marriage imposes substantial economic harms on same-sex couples residing in Utah and their children.”). Because they are not married, same-sex couples may be denied employment-related benefits and may have limited access to affordable employment-based health insurance. Id. at 2117 (Badgett Decl. ¶ 37) (explaining “that people with same-sex unmarried partners are much more likely to be uninsured than are married people”). Many same-sex couples eschew domestic partnerships due to their lesser status. Those couples are denied even the limited economic and legal protections that accrue to that designation.

More generally, marriage confers numerous economic benefits that stem from the unique commitment it represents. For example, marriage fosters greater specialization of labor, which can increase a couple’s income and the time available for family. J.A. at 2119 (Badgett Decl. ¶ 41). Marriage also tends to reduce a couple’s transaction costs: as a married couple’s economic fortunes change, the commitment and stability inherent in marriage permit them to avoid “renegotiat[ing] the terms of the legal relationship” between them. Id. at 2119 (Badgett Decl. ¶ 42). Furthermore, married individuals may enjoy greater employment-related economic gains, whereas same-sex couples who cannot marry face discrimination that may adversely affect their work performance and related economic rewards. Id. at 2117 (Badgett Decl. ¶¶ 36-37). Though difficult to quantify, these economic benefits of marriage are well-known and acknowledged in the field of economics. Id. at 2118 (Badgett Decl. ¶ 39).

Even in states that recognize domestic partnerships, domestic partners are afforded fewer rights than those offered to married couples. For example, in Nevada, domestic partners receive some, but not all, of the rights and responsibilities afforded to married couples. For example, employers are not required technically to provide health care benefits for domestic partners of their employees. Nev. Rev. Stat. § 122A.210(1). The fact that domestic partnership in Nevada is also open to different-sex couples confirms that it provides a different set of rights from those afforded by marriage. Nev. Rev. Stat. § 122A.100. Similarly, Maine, which adopted a same-sex marriage provision by popular vote in November 2012, advises citizens to “remember that a registered domestic partnership is NOT the same as a marriage and does not entitle partners to rights other than those for which the registry was intended,” namely “rights of inheritance, as well as the right to make decisions regarding disposal of their deceased partner's remains.”⁵ In New York City, domestic partners may enjoy, inter alia, visitation rights and city health benefits, but “[l]awfully married individuals, including individuals in same-sex marriages, are entitled to more New York State rights and benefits than those registered as domestic partners.”⁶

C. In the Wake of the Supreme Court's Decision in Windsor, the Tangible Benefits Associated with Marriage Are Even More Substantial.

The availability of federal benefits to married couples further demonstrates that the Marriage Bans inflict real economic and legal harm on same-sex couples. Statutory schemes that recognize domestic partnerships and civil unions but not marriage of same-sex couples result in the deprivation of federal benefits because many federal agencies offer such benefits only to lawfully married couples. Now that the Supreme Court's decision in Windsor invalidated Section 3 of the federal Defense of Marriage Act (“DOMA”), which prohibited federal recognition of the validity of same-sex couples' marriages, 133 S.Ct. at

The federal government uses "marriage" as a threshold for many federal protections and responsibilities. By defining "marriage" and "spouse" for federal purposes, Section 3 of DOMA effectively "control[led] over 1,000 federal laws" where marital or spousal status is a factor. Windsor, 133 S.Ct. at 2683 (citing U.S. Gov't Accountability Office, GA0-04-353R, Defense of Marriage Act: Update to Prior Report 1 (2004)). By denying same-sex couples the right to marry, Utah and Oklahoma have placed those federal protections and responsibilities entirely off-limits to them. See generally Garden State Equality v. Dow, No. M-208, slip op. at 15 (N.J. Oct. 18, 2013).

On the same day Windsor was decided, the President ordered a complete and comprehensive review of "all relevant federal statutes to ensure [the] decision, including its implications for Federal benefits and obligations, is implemented swiftly and smoothly." Statement by the President on the Supreme Court Ruling on the Defense of Marriage Act, whitehouse.gov (June 26, 2013). In striking down Section 3 of DOMA , the Supreme Court confined its holding to "lawful marriages." Windsor, 133. S.Ct. at 2696. Consistent with their existing benefits frameworks, the agencies that have taken action to date in response to the President's directive have extended protections and responsibilities to married same-sex couples and many agencies explicitly do not extend protections to registered domestic partners.⁷ For example, in its extensive guidance regarding federal benefits post-Windsor, the Office of Personnel Management expressly provided that “[b]enefits coverage is now available to a legally married same-sex spouse of a Federal employee or annuitant,” but “same-sex couples who are in a civil union or other forms of domestic partnership . . . will remain ineligible for most Federal benefits programs.” Office of Personnel Management, Benefits Admin. Letter at 1-2.

Likewise, on August 29, 2013, the Internal Revenue Service (“IRS”) ruled that all legal marriages of same-sex couples will be respected for federal tax purposes. Rev. Rul. 2013-17, 2013-381.R.B. 201, 204 (“For Federal tax purposes, the terms ‘spouse,’ ‘husband and wife,’ ‘husband,’ and ‘wife’ include an individual married to a person of the same sex if the individuals are lawfully married under state law, and . . . the term ‘marriage’ includes such a marriage between individuals of the same sex.”). However, the Revenue Ruling also specifically held that marital protections do not extend to persons “who have entered into a registered domestic partnership, civil union, or other similar formal relationship recognized under state law that is not denominated as a marriage under the laws of that state” Id.

⁷ To date, the federal government agencies extending protections based on lawful marriage include the Office of Personnel Management, the Department of Defense, the Department of Homeland Security, the Department of State, the Department of the Treasury and Internal Revenue Service, the Department of Labor, the Department of Health and Human Services, the Social Security Administration, the Department of Veterans Affairs, the Office of Governmental Ethics, and the Federal Elections Commission.

In the immigration context, whether a same-sex couple is lawfully married or merely in a domestic partnership or civil union could mean the difference between deportation and a valid basis for a family-based immigration visa. The United States Citizenship and Immigration Services (“USCIS”) has made clear that “same-sex marriages will be treated exactly the same as opposite-sex marriages” including, for example, with respect to eligibility for discretionary waivers of certain inadmissibility grounds based on marriage or status of a spouse, USCIS, Same Sex Marriages (March 2, 2014), available at <http://www.uscis.gov/family/same-sex-marriages>, at QA 9, and to the residency period required for naturalization of non-citizens married to U.S. citizens, id. at QA 8. These benefits would not be available to same-sex couples in domestic partnerships or civil unions.⁸

⁸ Certain governmental agencies, including the USCIS, have stated that “[a]s a general matter, the law of the place where the marriage was celebrated determines whether the marriage is legally valid for immigration purposes. . . . The domicile state’s laws and policies on same-sex marriages will not bear on whether USCIS will recognize a marriage as valid.” USCIS, Same Sex Marriages (March 2, 2014), available at <http://www.uscis.gov/family/same-sex-marriages>, at QA 3. This means that a same-sex couple living in a state with just civil unions or domestic

The guidance and policies issued by the Department of Homeland Security, Department of Defense and the Department of State further exemplify the primacy of lawful marriage in extending federal benefits to same-sex couples. On July 1, 2013, then-Department of Homeland Security Secretary Napolitano directed the USCIS to “review immigration visa petitions filed on behalf of a same-sex spouse in the same manner as those filed on behalf of an opposite-sex spouse.” Statement by Secretary of Homeland Security Janet Napolitano on the Implementation of the Supreme Court Ruling on the Defense of Marriage Act, dhs.gov (July 1, 2013), <http://www.dhs.gov/news/2013/07/01/statement-secretary-homeland-security-janet-napolitano-implementation-supreme-court>.⁹ The Department of State followed suit, beginning with Secretary Kerry’s announcement that U.S. embassies and consulates would adjudicate visa applications based on a marriage of a same-sex couple in the same way that they adjudicate applications for different-sex spouses. Same-Sex Couples, state.gov (Aug. 2, 2013), partnership, as well as such couples living in states that lack even these procedures, would be required to bear the burden of travelling out of state, away from their friends and families, to qualify for the same federal benefits afforded to heterosexual married couples.

⁹ That directive was formalized on July 26, 2013. See USCIS, Same-Sex Marriages (July 26, 2013), available at <http://www.uscis.gov/portal/site/uscis/> (follow “Same-Sex Marriages” hyperlink) (“USCIS FAQ”). See also U.S. Visas for Same-Sex Spouses, travel.state.gov, available at http://travel.state.gov/visa/frvi/frvi_6036.html (last visited Oct. 23, 2013) (spousal eligibility based on valid marriage) (“Visa FAQ”).

<http://www.state.gov/secretary/remarks/2013/08/212643.htm>. Similarly, in August 2013, Secretary of the Department of Defense Chuck Hagel advised that “[i]t is now the Department’s policy to treat all married military personnel equally. The Department will construe the words ‘spouse’ and ‘marriage’ to include same-sex spouses and marriages, and the Department will work to make the same benefits available to all military spouses, regardless of whether they are in same-sex or opposite-sex marriages.” Department of Defense, Memo. From Sec’y Chuck Hagel, Extending Benefits to the Same-Sex Spouses of Military Members at 1 (Aug. 13, 2013), available at http://www .defense.gov/home/features/2013/docs/Extending-Benefits-to-Same-Sex-Spouses-of-Military-Members.pdf. Though the availability of federal benefits continues to evolve, agency guidance makes clear that the threshold requirement to attain many of these benefits is lawful marriage – not a civil union or domestic partnership.

D. Excluding Same-Sex Couples from Marriage Perpetuates Discrimination Against Gay Men and Lesbians

The Marriage Bans also cause real and intangible harms to same-sex couples and their immediate and extended families. Even to the extent that a domestic partnership or civil union may confer legal benefits of marriage, the two-tiered regime disadvantages same-sex couples in numerous ways. First, banning same-sex couples from the valued institution of marriage makes them “other,” and demeans and stigmatizes them. This stigma, in turn, affects their physical and emotional health and well-being and encourages further discrimination against gay and lesbian individuals. This in turn causes “minority stress” that harms their physical and emotional well-being, and face increased discrimination.

1. Excluding Same-Sex Couples from Marriage Expresses Government Disapproval of Same-Sex Relationships

The two-tiered regime that the Marriage Bans establish conveys official disapproval of same-sex relationships. As the California Supreme Court explained in finding that domestic partnership was not a constitutionally adequate substitute for marriage:

[T]he statutory provisions that continue to limit access to [marriage] exclusively to opposite-sex couples—while providing only a novel, alternative institution for same-sex couples—likely will be viewed as an official statement that the family relationship of same-sex couples is not of comparable stature or equal dignity to the family relationship of opposite-sex couples.

In re Marriage Cases, 183 P.3d 384, 452 (Cal. 2008). To that end, the Court reasoned:

[T]here is a very significant risk that retaining a distinction in nomenclature with regard to this most fundamental of relationships whereby the term ‘marriage’ is denied only to same-sex couples inevitably will cause the new parallel institution that has been made available to those couples to be viewed as of a lesser stature than marriage and, in effect, as a mark of second-class citizenship.

Id., 183 P.3d at 445; see also Kerrigan, 957 A.2d at 474 (“[B]ecause of the long and celebrated history of the term ‘marriage’ and the widespread understanding that this word describes a family relationship unreservedly sanctioned by the community, the statutory provisions that continue to limit access to this designation exclusively to opposite-sex couples—while providing only a novel, alternative institution for same-sex couples—likely will be viewed as an official statement that the family relationship of same-sex couples is not of comparable stature or equal dignity to the family relationship of opposite-sex couples.”) (citing In re Marriage Cases, 43 Cal. 4th at 855); Goodridge, 798 N.E.2d at 962 (statutory bar on marriage for same-sex couples “confers an official stamp of approval on the destructive stereotype that same-sex relationships are inherently unstable and inferior to opposite-sex relationships and are not worthy of respect”).

The government disapproval expressed through the Marriage Bans is likewise constitutionally suspect in light of the motivations that underlie the legislation. As was true of Section 3 of the federal Defense of Marriage Act, the Marriage Bans’ “principal effect is to identify a subset of [relationships] and make them unequal. The principal purpose is to impose inequality.” Windsor, 133 S. Ct. at 2694. Indeed, in Utah, Appellants concede that the express purpose of the prohibition on same-sex marriage was to afford “special privilege and status” to opposite-sex couples and their children, in order to send the message that they are the State's preferred families, see Appellant Br. at 87, and to withhold protections from families headed by same-sex couples, in order to avoid sending the message that they "are on a par with traditional man-woman unions," id. at 73. In Oklahoma, the district court also confirmed that the "[the ban's] effect is to prevent every same-sex couple in Oklahoma from receiving a marriage license, and no other couple," Op. at 42 and that "[e]xclusion of the defined class was not a hidden or ulterior motive; it was consistently communicated to Oklahoma citizens as a justification for [the ban]," id. at 46.

The Marriage Bans' disapproval of same-sex couples is stigmatizing. Both judicial decisions and social science have recognized that government action singling out a group for disfavored treatment stigmatizes that group. See Lawrence v. Texas, 539 U.S. 558, 575 (2003) (stating that the "stigma" imposed by the Texas statute criminalizing "homosexual conduct" was "not trivial"); Brown, 347 U.S. at 494 (1954) (describing the "feeling of inferiority" that inevitably accompanies differential treatment); Strauder v. West Virginia, 100 U.S. 303, 308 (1879), abrogated on other grounds by Taylor v. Louisiana, 419 U.S. 522 (1975) (noting that exclusion of non-white citizens from juries was "practically a brand upon them, affixed by the law, an assertion of their inferiority"); J.A. at 2308 (Peplau Decl. ¶ 14) (discussing stigmatizing effects of discriminatory laws).

2. The Stigma Created by the Marriage Bans Causes Emotional and Physical Harm

The stigma resulting from the Marriage Bans' two-tiered regime has harmful consequences. That stigma can cause gay men and lesbians to suffer "minority stress," which manifests itself through "prejudice events": expectations of rejection and discrimination; concealment of identity; and internalized homophobia. See Ilan H. Meyer, Prejudice, Social Stress, and Mental Health in Lesbian, Gay and Bisexual Populations: Conceptual Issues and Research Evidence, 129 Psychol. Bull. 674 (2003).

Such stresses negatively affect the mental health and well-being of gay and lesbian individuals. See, e.g., Gilbert Herdt & Robert Kertzner, I Do, But I Can't: The Impact of Marriage Denial on the Mental Health and Sexual Citizenship of Lesbians and Gay Men in the United States, 3 J. Sexuality Res. Soc. Policy 33 (2006). Effects include "an increased risk of psychological problems, especially those like anxiety and depression that are most closely linked to stress," as well as more subtle diminishment of well-being. J.A. at 2314 (Peplau Decl. ¶ 31).

Internalized homophobia, for example, can lead to lowered self-esteem, anxiety, substance abuse, and depression. Gregory M. Herek et al., Correlates of Internalized Homophobia in a Community Sample of Lesbians and Gay Men, 2 J. Gay Lesbian Med. Assoc. 17 (1997). "And the recent spate of suicides among LGBT youth has highlighted the personal consequences of the ostracism and demonization of gay men and lesbians in American society.” J.A. at 2187

(Chauncey Decl. ¶ 95).

3. The Stigma Created by the Marriage Bans Perpetuates Discrimination Against Gay Men and Lesbians

By making sexual orientation a legally salient characteristic, the Marriage Bans also encourage and provide cover for those who seek to treat gay men and lesbians differently based on their sexual orientation. See, e.g., Perry v. Schwarzenegger, 704 F. Supp. 2d 921, 979 (N.D. Cal. 2010) (describing how Proposition 8 sent “a message that gay relationships are not to be respected; that they are of secondary value, if of any value at all; that they are certainly not equal to those of heterosexuals”). Because the state provides for separate and lesser treatment of gay men and lesbians, individuals may logically conclude that it is permissible to treat them as inferior. Cf. Lawrence, 539 U.S. at 575 (criminalizing sexual conduct between same-sex couples was “an invitation to subject homosexual persons to discrimination both in the public and in the private spheres”); Strauder, 100 U.S. at 308 (exclusion of non-white citizens from juries was “a stimulant to . . . race prejudice”).

Moreover, designating same-sex couples as different can trigger unintentional discrimination. Due to confusion regarding legal requirements, hospitals may refuse to allow a same-sex partner to be by a loved one’s side during a medical emergency, and doctors may not permit domestic partners to make medical decisions on behalf of an incapacitated partner. In an analogous context, the New Jersey Civil Union Review Commission received testimony that gay and lesbian individuals who were legally entitled to hospital visitation rights were delayed in gaining access to their hospitalized partners. For example, a woman whose partner was admitted to the emergency room with a potentially fatal cardiac arrhythmia was temporarily prevented from getting information about her partner's condition because the doctor was unfamiliar with civil unions. See New Jersey Commission Report at 1; see also id. at 14-15 (providing additional examples). Furthermore, employers may be less understanding of an employee's need to take leave to care for a domestic partner. Id. at 21 (testimony explaining that Massachusetts' marriage equality law has had the effect that, "without the term 'civil union' or 'domestic partner' to hide behind, if [employers] don't give equal benefits to employees in same-sex marriages, these employers would have to come forth with the real excuse for discrimination"). Even family members may not understand either the level of commitment expected of a domestic partner towards the couple's child, or the degree of attachment of the child to a domestic partner.

Moreover, by segregating gay men and lesbians, the Marriage Bans cause society to focus on sexual orientation to the exclusion of other characteristics. As with segregation on the basis of race, separating gay men and lesbians based on their sexual orientation causes that aspect of their identity to eclipse other attributes. See Robin A. Lenhardt, Understanding the Mark: Race, Stigma, and Equality in Context, 79 N.Y.U. L. Rev. 803, 818-19 (2004). Thus, when gay men or lesbians disclose that they are in a domestic partnership, others often see them only as gay—and treat them accordingly—rather than viewing them as full persons entitled to the same respect and dignity given to other members of society. See generally Marc R. Poirier, Name Calling: Identifying Stigma in the “Civil Union”/“Marriage” Distinction, 41 Conn. L. Rev. 1425, 1429-30, 1479-89 (2009) (describing the way in which the nomenclature distinction perpetuates bias and facilitates discrimination).

CONCLUSION

At odds with time-honored constitutional commands, the Marriage Bans create a separate and unequal regime for a disfavored class of individuals. By excluding same-sex couples from the hallowed, state-sponsored institution of marriage, the Marriage Bans inflict profound injury upon gay and lesbian individuals and their children. Because of the Marriage Bans, gay men and lesbians and their families are deprived of meaningful benefits; suffer from state-sanctioned stigma; and are exposed to further discrimination on the basis of their sexual orientation. There is no doubt that the Marriage Bans impose “immediate, continuing, and real injur[y]” on gay and lesbian individuals. Romer, 517 U.S. at

635. The patently separate-but-unequal regime effected by the Marriage Bans fails any level of judicial scrutiny.

Marital regulations have long been a way of “draw[ing] lines among the citizenry” and “defin[ing] what kinds of sexual relations and which families will be legitimate.” Nancy Cott, Public Vows: A History of Marriage and the Nation 4 (2000). Numerous racial and religious minorities have, at various times in history, faced restrictions on their privilege to marry. See id. But “[a] prime part of the history of our Constitution . . . is the story of the extension of constitutional rights and protections to people once ignored or excluded.” Virginia, 518 U.S. at 557. Continuing to exclude, demean, and stigmatize gay and lesbian individuals is inconsistent with that constitutional tradition. Amici urge this court to find that the Marriage Bans are unconstitutional.

APPENDIX: STATEMENTS OF AMICI

Amici respectfully submit the following statements regarding their interests in this matter:

Austin LGBT Bar Association (“Austin LGBT Bar”)

The Austin LGBT Bar Association (“Austin LGBT Bar”) is a membership organization comprised of over 100 attorneys, judges, and law students located in Austin, Texas. It has a voting member on the Board of Directors of the Austin Travis County Bar Association. The Austin LGBT Bar conducts bi-monthly certified continuing legal education programs on the laws and statutes that impact the lives of LGBT persons and implements mentoring programs for law students. In addition to promoting education on issues relating to LGBT law, one of the stated purposes of the Austin LGBT Bar is to help raise the profile and acceptance of LGBT individuals within the legal community and to serve as examples for professionalism. The Austin LGBT Bar works hard to educate Texas attorneys on how to best represent their gay and lesbian clients in the extremely difficult climate that exists due to a disparate and unequal treatment of LGBT persons under the law – particularly with regard to gay and lesbian families.

Bar Association of San Francisco (“BASF”)

The Bar Association of San Francisco (“BASF”) is a nonprofit voluntary membership organization of attorneys, law students, and legal professionals in the San Francisco Bay Area. Founded in 1872, BASF enjoys the support of more than 7,500 individuals, law firms, corporate legal departments, and law schools. Through its board of directors, committees, volunteer legal services programs, and other community efforts, BASF has worked to promote and achieve equal justice for all and oppose discrimination in all its forms, including, but not limited to, discrimination based on race, sex, disability, and sexual orientation.

Colorado Gay Lesbian Bisexual Transgender (“GLBT”) Bar Association

The Colorado Gay Lesbian Bisexual Transgender (GLBT) Bar Association is a voluntary professional association of gay, lesbian, bisexual and transgender attorneys, judges, paralegals and law students and allies who provide a GLBT presence within Colorado’s legal community. The mission of the GLBT Bar Association includes promoting the recognition of civil and human rights; promoting sensitivity to legal issues faced by the GLBT community; assuring the fair and just treatment of members of the GLBT community and enhancing the practice and professional expertise of lawyers who serve or who are members of the GLBT community.

Freedom to Marry

Freedom to Marry is the campaign to win marriage nationwide. Freedom to Marry works with partner organizations and individuals to win marriage in more states, solidify and diversify the majority for marriage, and challenge and end federal marriage discrimination. Freedom to Marry is based in New York, and has participated as amicus curiae in several marriage cases in the United States and abroad.

LGBT & Allied Lawyers of Utah Bar Association

LGBT & Allied Lawyers of Utah is a non-profit organization of associated legal professionals and members of the Utah State Bar, whose mission is to promote education, advocacy, and equality with regard to sexual orientation, gender identity, and gender expression.

Love Honor Cherish (“LHC”)

Love Honor Cherish (“LHC”) is the largest grassroots marriage equality organization in Southern California. Founded in May 2008 to defend the California Supreme Court’s decision In re Marriage Cases, 43 Cal. 4th 757 (2008), LHC has strategically moved marriage equality forward since its inception. In 2010 and 2012, LHC launched efforts to gather signatures to put repeal of Proposition 8 on the ballot in California due to its unwavering dedication to restore marriage equality in California as soon as possible. While those efforts were unsuccessful due to the prohibitive cost of funding a signature gathering campaign, LHC's volunteers had more than one million conversations about the importance of marriage equality with California voters. LHC continues to advance marriage equality through public education, community empowerment and outreach in collaboration its coalition partners.

Marriage Equality USA

Marriage Equality USA is a national, not-for profit, volunteer-based organization, comprised of over 40,000 same-sex couples, lesbian, gay, bisexual, and transgender people, their families, friends, supporters, and allies. The organization leads nonpartisan, community-based educational efforts to secure the freedom to marry for all loving, committed couples without regard to sexual orientation or gender identity and to have those marriages fully recognized by the federal government.

Minnesota Lavender Bar Association (“MLBA”)

The Minnesota Lavender Bar Association (MLBA) is a voluntary professional association of LGBT attorneys and allies, promoting fairness and equality for the LGBT community within the legal industry and for the Minnesota community. The MLBA envisions a Minnesota where LGBT attorneys, clients, and community members are treated equally and without discrimination. The MLBA's mission is to promote equality and justice in the legal profession and the LGBT community in Minnesota.

National Asian Pacific American Bar Association (“NAPABA”)

The National Asian Pacific American Bar Association (“NAPABA”) is the national association of Asian Pacific American attorneys, judges, law professors, and law students. NAPABA represents the interests of over 40,000 attorneys and 62 local Asian Pacific American bar associations, who work variously in solo practices, large firms, corporations, legal services organizations, non-profit organizations, law schools, and government agencies. Since its inception in 1988, NAPABA has been at the forefront of national and local activities in the areas of civil rights. Equal access to the fundamental right to marry is one such right which Asian Pacific Americans were long denied through anti-miscegenation laws, and NAPABA joins amici to continue the defense of equal access to the fundamental right to marry.

The New Mexico Lesbian and Gay Lawyers Association (“NMLGLA”), formed in 1995, is a non-profit, voluntary bar organization committed to promoting and protecting the interests of the lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender lawyers and to achieving their full participation in all rights, privileges and benefits of the legal profession. The NMLGLA also strives to promote the efficient administration of justice and the constant improvement of the law, especially as it relates to lesbians, gay men, bisexual and transgender individuals.

The OUTLaws

The OUTLaws is an association of LGBT and allied students at the S.J. Quinney School of Law at the University of Utah. The OUTLaws seek to educate law students and the community about issues facing the LGBT community, and partner with existing local organizations to improve the legal standing of Utah's LGBT citizens and families. As such, the OUTLaws have a strong interest in the outcome of Kitchen v. Herbert and Bishop v. U.S.

QLaw, the GLBT Bar Association of Washington

QLaw, the GLBT Bar Association of Washington, is an association of gay, lesbian, bisexual, and transgender (GLBT) legal professionals and their friends. QLaw serves as a voice for gay, lesbian, bisexual, and transgender lawyers and other legal professionals in the state of Washington on issues relating to diversity and equality in the legal profession, in the courts, and under the law. The organization has five purposes: to provide opportunities for members of the GLBT legal community to meet in a supportive, professional atmosphere to exchange ideas and information; to further the professional development of GLBT legal professionals and law students; to educate the public, the legal profession, and the courts about legal issues of particular concern to the GLBT community; to empower members of the GLBT community by improving access to the legal and judicial system and sponsoring education programs; and to promote and encourage the advancement of lesbian, gay, bisexual, and transgender attorneys in the legal profession.

Stonewall Bar Association of Georgia, Inc.

Stonewall Bar Association of Georgia, Inc. was established in 1995 as a coalition of attorneys, judges, law students, paralegals, and other legal professionals to utilize their expertise to support the rights of lesbian, gay, bisexual, and transgender people and oppose discrimination based on sexual orientation and gender identity. A voluntary bar association, consisting of almost 300 dues-paying members, SBA publishes an on-line directory of attorneys who are eager to serve gay, lesbian, bisexual and transgender clients. The organization also publishes a monthly newsletter that is emailed to approximately 800 legal professionals, provides scholarships to law students, conducts continuing education for attorneys, and provides opportunities for networking with judges and other legal professionals. SBA has worked with other organizations to file amicus briefs in cases that impact our community in Georgia. Such briefs have been submitted in cases that overturned Georgia's sodomy law and secured the rights of local governments and private corporations to offer domestic partnership benefits to company employees and their life partners.

Stonewall Bar Association of Michigan

The Stonewall Bar Association of Michigan is a voluntary state-wide professional association of lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender lawyers and our allies providing a visible LGBT presence within the Michigan legal system. SBA members seek to protect and advance the rights of all Michiganders by providing legal representation, advocacy, education and outreach on the issues facing members of the LGBT community. Our membership forms a network for referrals and support, and provides a forum for discussing the needs of LGBT attorneys and clients throughout Michigan. SBA supports marriage equality for all Americans, and opposes discrimination based upon sexual orientation or gender identity or expression.

Stonewall Law Association of Greater Houston (SLAGH)
