2022–23 Annual Report

From Imani

Dear NCLR Family,

The fight for civil rights and social justice can feel daunting at times. We have extraordinary wins that seem to propel us forward, but we also have heartbreaking setbacks, finding ourselves once again fighting for basic human rights, not only in the courts, but also in the court of public opinion.

This past year brought an unprecedented level of political vitriol directed at our community. This hate and discrimination extends beyond the LGBTQ community, impacting parents, children and professionals everywhere. From bans on transgender kids playing sports and criminalizing medically necessary healthcare for transgender people, to books with positive representations of LGBTQ characters being removed from libraries, to censoring the true and accurate impacts of racism and slavery on our nation, multi-faceted attacks on marginalized communities are only increasing. In some parts of the country, just mentioning the term “LGBTQ” in classrooms can get a teacher fired. And all over the world, we are witnessing the worst parts of humanity.

These challenges sometimes feel insurmountable. We started our last fiscal year with the Supreme Court decision that stripped our right to abortion. This decision, for the first time in Supreme Court history, took away a previously protected right, leaving us with fewer protections and less autonomy over our own bodies.

As harrowing as this is, this is not the worst our community has faced. When we look back on the history of civil rights in this country, we have to remember that this IS THE FIGHT. There are often great losses before monumental wins—and we are in the thick of that now. Years from now, we will look back to this time as a reminder of how we responded in the face of horrendous oppression. We push forward. This is what will make tomorrow’s progress possible.

While the attacks on our community seem unrelenting, our resolve has never been stronger. NCLR is taking bold action to defend our rights, and together, the future is bright.

Thank you for believing in us, and believing in justice.

In solidarity,

Imani

From the Board

Dear NCLR Friends and Family,

When we joined the NCLR Board of Directors, we knew we were becoming part of something bigger than the both of us, offering our expertise and passion to a movement we both live and believe in with all our hearts.

What we couldn't see then was just how critical the work of NCLR would continue to be as our country started to backslide on our rights, lifting up new and incredibly dangerous tropes about LGBTQ people. We didn't foresee the cruel and dangerous attacks on youth, the reversal of a 50-year-old right to abortion, or the constant assault on transgender people in social media, mainstream media, schools and local governments.

What we have always known, however, is that NCLR is special. A team of brilliant, committed individuals who, as a collective, create one of the most forward-thinking, collaborative and intersectional organizations in the LGBTQ movement. Founded on the best of feminist principles, NCLR champions those of us consistently left out of the conversation and sees solutions before most even realize the problem.

Through programs such as Rural Pride, Born Perfect, the LGBTQ Anti-Poverty Network and our Immigration and Asylum Program, NCLR brings a full understanding of the complex and layered barriers to equality for all LGBTQ people. We cannot fight for equity and justice for LGBTQ people without fighting for racial, gender and economic justice for all.

Our greater goal of a society that values all of its citizens, holds up individual beauty and self-expression and truly protects each individual's right to be who they are is never out of reach. For today, we will roll up our sleeves and take on state after state, all the way to the Supreme Court, to protect the right of Floridians to "Say Gay", for LGBTQ Alabamans to receive healthcare and for youth in Utah to play sports, and tomorrow we will continue to be where we are needed most.

Thank you for coming on this journey with us — together, we know real and lasting change is possible!

Sincerely,

Elisa Diana Huerta and Liz Kim, NCLR Board Co-Chairs

Runaway Court

“ There is hardly a more egregious assault on individual liberty than forcing someone to be pregnant against their will. For the first time, the Supreme Court has reversed a long-standing precedent to take away – not expand – liberty rights under the Constitution.

—Imani Rupert Gordon

This fiscal year began with chilling news. The highest court in the land, for the first time in history, took away a fundamental human right by ruling that the constitution does not protect the right to terminate a pregnancy. The ramifications were almost immediate, with trigger laws shuttering clinics across the country overnight. As time passed, we saw voters turn out in droves for statewide elections to enshrine abortion into law, but we still have no definitive abortion protections to circumvent the decision at the federal level, and the citizens of many states with restrictive laws are reeling as a result.

Meanwhile, rulings hostile to the ethos of the social justice movement continued to be handed down. The decision to overturn Brown v. Board of Education, effectively ending affirmative action, and the ongoing attempt to dismantle voting rights and union protections for the majority of workers, are eroding a generation of settled law. By June of 2023, almost exactly one year after Dobbs, another devastating blow to equal protections was decided in the highest court, when the outcome of 303 Creative legalized prejudicial public services. While the court’s decision in 303 Creative is “narrow”, it affirms that discrimination on the basis of sexual orientation is allowable for some business owners with strongly held religious beliefs, in spite of pre-existing precedent to the contrary.

The impact of these pivotal Supreme Court decisions cannot be overstated. The loss of privacy and bodily autonomy rights outlined in Roe v. Wade, and the adjoining implications for decisions like Obergefell and Loving v. Virginia, have set our movement back decades. The court’s disregard for precedent poses a clear and present danger to freedoms that are of utmost importance not only to LGBTQ people but to every person in this country.

As a legal organization, the ground is shifting under our feet, and our strategies must shift to meet an increasingly hostile climate. Our work to protect LGBTQ rights is entering a new phase, one in which we may no longer be able to rely on precedent. Luckily for us, NCLR’s justice work has never relied solely on litigation. While defending our rights and clients in court is central to our mission, our work to build a powerful justice coalition, train law firms and attorneys to better assist LGBTQ clients facing discrimination, and educate the broader public on the dangers of rulings like Dobbs and 303 Creative has never been more critical.

The court may be on the run, but NCLR remains grounded in the past, present and future of the LGBTQ Justice Movement.

Our Work

EXPANDING ACCESS AND EQUITY

Discrimination against LGBTQ people and their families happens in every state, city, and community around the country. NCLR's goal is to be there when the most vulnerable members of our community need us the most and expand access and equity protections for all.

Bathroom access continues to be a contentious debate across the country, with various bills introduced attempting to ban certain people from using public facilities. NCLR secured an important victory for LGBTQ equality when a U.S. District Court entered a final order prohibiting enforcement of Tennessee HB 1182, a law passed in 2021 requiring businesses to post a demeaning notice if they permit LGBTQ patrons to use the same restrooms as other patrons. This court order sets important precedent reaffirming that businesses cannot be forced to refuse equal service to all patrons based on sexual orientation or gender identity. The challenge, brought by NCLR and partner attorneys on behalf of Mike Curb, founder and Chairman of Curb Records and President of the Mike Curb Foundation, asserted that HB 1182 promoted a hostile climate for LGBTQ people in the state and denied them equal access to businesses open to the public and to employment and educational opportunities. Mr. Curb argued that the law would compel his and other Tennessee businesses to endorse a climate of fear and nonacceptance of LGBTQ people.

Disparities in access and equity often disproportionately affect LGBTQ people living in rural communities. As part of our ongoing Rural Pride initiative, NCLR organized coalition building and training opportunities across the country, reaching LGBTQ people in underserved areas. We convened the North Dakota LGBTQ Summit, a gathering of LGBTQ rights advocates, activists and humanitarians to build power across the state, and hosted legal cultural competency trainings for Inland Counties Fair Housing and Mediation Board in California, Legal Aid of West Virginia and nationally at the 2023 Equal Justice Conference in Dallas, Texas. These convenings and trainings expand access to legal services for LGBTQ people facing discrimination by equipping more attorneys in rural areas who may lack exposure to our community with tools to better serve and support LGBTQ clients, while creating opportunities for advocates to network with one another.

NCLR consistently submits comments to the federal government on proposed policy in an effort to defend LGBTQ rights. Comments were recently submitted to the U.S. Department of Education supporting its proposed rule requiring equal treatment of transgender students in school sports under Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972, and stressing the urgency of creating clear federal policy in the face of the unlawful bans proliferating in many states. NCLR executive Director Imani Rupert-Gordon, along with the nation's top civil rights leaders, reproductive rights and justice organizations, met with Vice President Kamala Harris to discuss the harmful impact of the U.S. Supreme Court's ruling in the Dobbs v. Jackson Women's Health Organization and the ongoing threat to our democracy.

It is essential that NCLR continues to have a presence on Capitol Hill, reminding members of the House and Senate that we expect them to act in the best interests of all of their LGBTQ constituents.

YOUTH

For 30 years, NCLR's youth project has been leading LGBTQ legal organizations in advocating for LGBTQ youth. Through public education, training, policy advocacy and litigation, NCLR works to ensure that all LGBTQ youth are safe and able to live openly with the support they need to thrive and reach their full potential.

NCLR prioritizes our work advocating for the rights of youth due to ongoing attacks on their civil rights, safety in school, and access to medically necessary care. Discriminatory legislation and hostile rhetoric leads to violence that harms children and forces more youth into the juvenile justice system. NCLR undertook new litigation, including Florida and Kentucky's bans on essential medical care for transgender youth and Arizona's sports ban on behalf of transgender youth in those states. In our challenge to Utah's sports ban for transgender girls, NCLR obtained an order from the Third District Court of Utah blocking enforcement of HB 11, meaning that kids in Utah can play sports while the case proceeds without the restrictions HB 11 would impose.

NCLR sustained ongoing litigation against Alabama's law that makes it a felony to provide medically necessary healthcare to transgender youth; against Florida's "Don't Say Gay or Trans" law; and against the Arizona surgical requirement for correcting birth certificates, which has become a class action lawsuit, meaning a positive outcome in the case will benefit anyone in Arizona seeking to legally change their gender marker.

NCLR staff served on the Juvenile Regulations Executive Steering Committee for the California Board of State and Community Corrections (BSCC), which reviews revisions to the Title 15 and Title 24 regulations governing juvenile facilities in California; and helped coordinate Georgetown's Center for Juvenile Justice Reform's (CJJR) Supporting the Well-Being of System-Involved LGBTQ Youth Virtual Certificate Program in November of 2022.

And in an exciting win for youth in Department of Juvenile Justice facilities in the state of California, Governor Gavin Newsom signed AB2417, otherwise known as the Youth Bill of Rights, into law on July 30, 2022. AB 2417 includes protections against discrimination based on gender expression and immigration status, timely access to restroom facilities, clean clothing and education access for youth experiencing incarceration.

BORN PERFECT

In June 2014, NCLR launched Born Perfect, a program to end conversion therapy. We do so by passing laws across the country to protect LGBTQ children and young people, fighting in courtrooms to ensure their safety, and raising awareness about the serious harms caused by these dangerous practices because every child is #BornPerfect.

NCLR's Born Perfect program continues to maintain a national network of over 380 survivors, and tracks 6,549 providers suspected to be offering conversion therapy. Of these, 5,333 are individual counselors and 1,216 are organizations. Born Perfect staff provides public education and technical assistance to state-level activists advocating against conversion therapy, with positive changes in state law and policy taking place this fiscal year in states including Arizona, Michigan, Minnesota, Pennsylvania, and Utah.

In January of 2023, medical students testified in large numbers to support Minnesota legislation that would prohibit harmful conversion therapy by licensed professionals against minors – while social work students opposed legislation in North Dakota that would protect conversion practices from regulatory discipline.

NCLR was an intervenor in a Ninth Circuit case which unanimously affirmed that Washington State's law protecting minors from conversion therapy is constitutional and may be enforced, and filed an amicus brief in a similar case in Colorado.

RELATIONSHIPS AND FAMILIES

Protecting LGBTQ people's family relationships has been a core aspect of NCLR's work since its founding in 1977. From marriage equality to protecting unmarried partners, to the ability to have and raise children to establishing protections for transgender parents and transgender youth, NCLR has been at the forefront of advancing the rights of LGBTQ people and their families for decades.

This year, NCLR undertook new litigation fighting to regain the parental rights for a woman in Oklahoma. Our client, a lesbian non-biological parent, lost custody of her child when the child's sperm donor was deemed the lawful second parent by a court of law. Because Oklahoma's parental law governing child custody predates federal marriage equality law, the judge in the original custody case refused to apply the presumption that both spouses are legal parents of a child born during marriage, and instead ruled the sperm donor is the child's second legal parent. NCLR is appealing the decision and demanding that the state protect this family equally in custody and divorce proceedings and apply parental presumption laws to all married spouses in the state.

Recognizing the serious implications of the Dobbs v. Jackson Women's Health decision for the entire reproductive justice movement, NCLR formed a multi-stakeholder post-Dobbs IVF working group along with Family Equality and advocates, academics, private attorneys and medical providers across the country to combat the growing threat that striking down federal abortion access protections poses to in vitro fertilization and other fertility treatments.

Together, our organizations focus on the need to situate the threats to assisted reproduction and diverse family structures more broadly and develop strategies to oppose personhood laws and abortion restrictions that undermine the ability of individuals and families to make their own assisted reproduction decisions. Fetal personhood efforts, and the anti-choice framework from which it flows, is part of a coordinated, long-term strategy meant to undermine reproductive and bodily autonomy, including access to abortion, and allow for the criminalization of all pregnancy outcomes, and affects LGBTQ couples hoping to grow their families at an exceeding high rate.

NCLR will continue to champion reproductive justice, bodily autonomy, and the right to privacy as fundamental human rights.

IMMIGRATION & ASYLUM

NCLR became the first national LGBTQ organization to create and operate an Immigration Project in 1994 when the U.S. recognized that immigrants facing persecution on the basis of their sexual orientation could seek protection as refugees and asylees. Over the past 30 years the program has supported more than 500 immigrants and asylees in reaching safety inside our borders.

NCLR assisted over 150 LGBTQ immigrants in a rapidly shifting climate —providing legal referrals, advice about seeking asylum and tracking changes to federal asylum and immigration policy. NCLR provides one-on-one assistance to detainees, direct representation to clients in immigration court, and support to asylum seekers in accessing social services while awaiting their rulings. Five of our clients successfully secured asylum this year, meaning that they are no longer facing deportation and can safely begin to plan for their future in the United States.

RACIAL AND ECONOMIC JUSTICE

The most important issues LGBTQ people of color and low-income people face are often caused by racism and poverty. Unless we work to change systemic racism and fight poverty, LGBTQ people will never be able to live free from oppression. NCLR advocates to improve the social safety net and workers' rights, co-leads the National LGBTQ Anti-Poverty Network, and supports the work of coalitions such as the Movement for Black Lives and Coalition on Human Needs.

This year, NCLR sustained our role in convening the National LGBTQ+ Anti-Poverty Action Network. In August of 2022, NCLR co-hosted Unwashed Justice: Uplifting Queer Workers and Economic Justice for All at the Kennedy Center, a panel discussion exploring poverty, race and class in the LGBTQ+ community. The panel explored how the root causes of systemic racial and gender discrimination shape economic oppression in the LGBTQ+ community, and the efforts to actualize economic justice. To ensure that resources are available to community members experiencing discrimination and poverty, NCLR maintained our free national legal Helpline, which responded to 1,225 requests for legal assistance.

NCLR will continue to support the Raise the Wage Act and the Medicare for All Act. These bills would, respectively, increase the federal minimum wage for the first time since 2009 and gradually end the subminimum wage for tipped workers, and establish a single-payer healthcare system.

Staying the Course

Despite the challenges we are currently facing, NCLR is proud to be a leader in the fight for LGBTQ justice, and will always be committed to building a more just world. NCLR's education and advocacy initiatives have helped to combat disinformation and created a collective narrative shift, changing how we talk about LGBTQ people on a national scale, and as a result, helping to make victories for our community much more likely. Our ongoing litigation sets precedent and makes headlines that cannot be ignored, while striking down discriminatory legislation that, if passed, would violate our constitutional rights. And our influence in federal policy making ensures that lawmakers committed to equal protection under the law have the understanding and resources needed to draft culturally and legally informed legislation that will keep our community safe.

Supreme Court Reverses Roe v. Wade. The decision in Dobbs v. Jackson Women’s Health Organization reveals the high court has abandoned individual rights. In a 6-3 ruling, the United States Supreme Court held that the Constitution does not protect the fundamental right to abortion, overruling the landmark decisions Roe v. Wade and Planned Parenthood v. Casey →

“It is impossible to overstate how dangerous this is. The U.S. Supreme Court has done a complete about-face and held that individuals do not have the right to decide for themselves whether or not to continue a pregnancy.”

— Imani Rupert-Gordon, NCLR Executive Director

The Third District Court of Utah issues an order blocking enforcement of a newly enacted law, HB 11, that barred all transgender girls from playing on girls’ sports teams. The court holds that the new law likely violates the equality guarantees of the Utah Constitution by singling out transgender girls and barring them from competing on girls’ teams regardless of their individual circumstances. →

“This is a win not only for my child but for all girls in this state. This law is based on stereotypes and misconceptions that are harmful to all girls. I am grateful the court has put this dangerous law on pause and that, at least for the moment, all Utah children can know that they are valued and supported.”

KATHRYN FRIEBE LEGACY CIRCLE

When life-long lesbian activist Mary Kathryn Friebe died of cancer at the age of 81 in 2002, she continued her commitment to NCLR by making a very generous bequest to our organization. In her memory, we established the Friebe Legacy Circle, designed to honor and recognize individuals to confirm their dedication to LGBTQ rights by including NCLR in their estate plans. We are grateful for the visionary generosity of donors who have joined the Kathryn Friebe Legacy Circle.
